CAYATHERM has very soon become one of the best-selling preparations. I often hear massage therapists say: "CAYATHERM is a preparation that no massage therapist can go without". Suffice it to say that it will work equally as well in nearly every household. Thanks to its unique composition, CAYATHERM has proved effective in relieving all sorts of pains, whether of muscle or even joint nature. Back pain, lumbago, osteoarthritis, arthritis, shingles, itching. This is just a small selection of problems, which makes it sufficiently clear, however, how they can make life difficult. CAYATHERM has always proved to work. From the point of view of aromatherapy, CAYATHERM is a very "warm" preparation. The main ingredients include circulation-boosting essential oils, which are able to penetrate into deeper layers of the skin. On application it usually produces a hot feeling, weaker or stronger. Thanks to the combination of essential oils, blood circulation is increased and metabolic waste products are carried away from the tissue of the treated area. As CAYATHERM warms the area through by means of the combination of essential oils, pain subsides or even wears off completely. I recommend applying CAYATHERM to painful areas even several times a day if needed, and to rub it in however briefly.

You can enhance the effects of CAYATHERM by a half an hour long wrap. It is absolutely necessary to wash your hands after application in order to prevent the active ingredients from entering your eyes.

Main ingredients: Vegetable oils: almond, walnut, jojoba, canola, soybean, karité. Lecithin. Essential oils: clove, pepper, frankincense, rosemary, lemon balm, rose, juniper, chili powder. Vitamins A, E, F.

Application: Apply the required amount to the skin and rub or massage in gently.

Warning: An exception to this rule will obviously be the case of treating the ailing hands themselves, in which case don't wash the preparation off, but be extra careful. Although it is a very warm and therefore irritable preparation, it is very well tolerated. Redness and hot feeling in the treated area are desirable in this case.
